

El Bierzo is a natural region located in the northwest of the Spanish province of León. A set of small valleys in a mountain area and a wide flat depression called "el bajo Bierzo".

The area has a very special microclimate, very suitable to the crops in the area. Mencía is the main red grape and it represents 74.5% of the grapes grown in the production area.

Bierzo wines have their own personality. They are wines with terroir that tell about a unique territory with genuine characteristics that we can find in the tasting and when we share a glass of wine.

D.O. BIERZO

Bodegas Cobertizo

D.O. Bierzo

Toni Quiroga decided to start his adventure in wine 20 years ago, when he started to work in the lands that belonged to his father "el cubano" in Valtuille de Abajo.

22 hectares are the base of this family bodega. Love for his lands and his roots, and respect for the traditions and customs in the heart of El Bierzo region.

Organic wine

Organic procedures and alive soils

The wines from Bodegas Cobertizo are produced complying with the organic production procedures and beyond, with extremely low sulfites, far lower than the European ecological standard limits.

Viticulture is rational and sustainable, we obtain the maximum benefits that this lands provide us. In organic vineyards like ours, it is usual to leave a vegetal cover between strains to bring balance to the ground.

In our reds we use old vines of Mencia (60 years) and in our white wines we use Godello (50 years). When vineyards are this old they can't be manipulated with machines, everything is done manually.
